The fellow that goes around looking for trouble generally finds it.

"In time of peace prepare for war," is a motto that has no place in twentieth century civilization.

Today we commemorate the birth of Abraham Lincoln, not because he attained great wealth, not because of the pomp and display which attended him, not because of great genius in war; but because he rose by his own efforts from the humblest beginnings and fitted himself to bear the greatest responsibility and to fill a position of highest trust.

It is a matter of real satisfaction to us to note the fact that we have school teachers in Fulton County who are alert to improve every opportunity to train and educate their pupils for practical life and good citizenship.

One hundred years of peace between two great nations, with 4000 miles of boundary lines by land and sea without a fortification or a battleship or a single sentinel to guard those lines on either side, is something worthy of celebrating.

The Treaty of Ghent which was the technical beginning of this century of peace was signed December 24th, 1814; the treaty arrived in New York February 17th, 1815, and was ratified by the Senate on February 17th, 1815.

Do not forget your can of milk next Sunday. Every one can help in this good work.

Don't forget to order that Azalea or some other flowers for Valentine's Day. Remember, a rose to the living is more than a wreath to the dead.
